

Louis J. Aronne, MD, FACP

Clinical Professor of Medicine
Weill Medical College of Cornell University;
Adjunct Associate Professor of Clinical Medicine
Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons
New York, New York
Director, Comprehensive Weight Control Program
New York Presbyterian Hospital, New York, New York

Louis J. Aronne, MD, FACP, is a leading authority on obesity and its treatment. He is Clinical Professor of Medicine at Weill-Cornell Medical College and has an adjunct appointment at Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons. He is Director of the Comprehensive Weight Control Program, a state-of-the-art, multidisciplinary obesity research and treatment program affiliated with New York Presbyterian Hospital.

A graduate of Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine, he graduated Phi Beta Kappa from Trinity College with a BS in Biochemistry. He completed his internship and residency at Albert Einstein College of Medicine and the Bronx Municipal Hospital Center. He completed his graduate education as Henry J. Kaiser Family Foundation Fellow at New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center.

Dr. Aronne is Former President of the North American Association for the Study of Obesity and a Fellow of the American College of Physicians. He has authored more than 40 papers and book chapters on obesity, and edited the National Institutes of Health Practical Guide to the Identification, Evaluation, and Treatment of Overweight and Obesity in Adults. He was a consultant to the VA Weight Management/Physical Activity Executive Council.

Dr. Aronne has won several awards for medical teaching, including the Davidoff Prize from Albert Einstein College of Medicine and the Elliot Hochstein Award from Cornell University. He is a member of the Alpha Omega Alpha medical honor society.

Since 2001, Dr. Aronne has been ranked annually in New York Magazine's 'Best Doctors in NY' as a specialist in obesity, diabetes and internal medicine.